ANNOUNCEMENT

We are pleased to announce 1922 prices effective now on the celebrated De Laval Cream Separators. These reductions place them to pre-war levels.

J. R. BROTHER & CO.

Watson Thomas went to Carlisle Thursday to testify in a case against Hick Tally. The case was for carrying concealed deadly weapons and Tally was fined $50 and sentenced to ten days in jail.

The Globe Tailoring man will be at Goodpastor & Co.'s store October 4 and 5, and will show woollens in full length drapes. Go and order a suit of correct style and best quality of goods.

The fall term of Circuit Court will begin Monday. The most important criminal case to be tried is that of the Commonwealth against E. C. Kimbrell charged with the murder of Ed Bailey.

Narrow Escape

Allie Donathan, driver of the Indian Refining Co.'s oil truck, while driving around a curve coming down the hill near Mrs. Belle Rice's had a serious accident. The steering gear of his machine became locked. The truck going at a good rate, turned over twice, the first time tearing off the top leaving the driver sitting in it on the side of the road. Mr. Donathan received only slight bruises but the machine was considerably damaged. It was a very narrow escape.

OUTLOOK $1.50 PER YEAR.

SCHOOL RALLY

A Large Crowd Attends and sees Gorgeous Parade

The sixth annual School Rally and Common School Commencement of the rural schools of Bath Co. came off Friday and Saturday. There was a light crowd in attendance the first day the second day being regarded as the one of chief importance and interest. The Parent-Teacher's parade and the speech of Prof. N. C. Hammack, of Louisville, and formerly Superintendent of Schools of Jefferson county, were the principal events. The parade was a very creditable one and the speech of Prof. Hammack in the interest of common schools was highly complimented on all hands. A large crowd witnessed the athletic events which took place on Robt. 'Shields' lot in the west end of town. In the afternoon the Salt Lick baseball team defeated the Owingsville team by a score of 7 to 1.

The common school commencement was at the City School building.

Second Day.

The second day started off most unfavorably with a downpour of rain, which lasted until nearly 8 o'clock, and did fair to keep at home the vast throng which afterward came and surged through the streets the entire day. Although the weather continued cloudy and threatening, the parade of the school children and teachers came off on schedule time, and was universally pronounced the most magnificent parade ever seen in the town of Owingsville.

Licking Union, Wyoming, East Fork and other large schools of the county, which had made elaborate preparations for the event, became water-bound and although the most strenuous efforts were made, they couldn't cross the swollen streams. The premium for the best riding parade was won by Tunnell Hill school, Mrs. C. W. Bristow teacher; the walking parade was won by Harper's school, Miss Carrie Nixon, teacher. There were 1,500 children in the parade.

The spelling contest and the base ball games were each witnessed by large and interested crowds.

The school exhibits on display at the court-house were unusually fine and were viewed by almost a continuous stream of people all day.

At 2:30 o'clock Prof. George Colvin, State Superintendent of Schools, delivered an excellent address in the interest of common schools in general and in favor of the two proposed amendments to the State constitution in particular. His arguments were clear and seemed to be convincing to the vast crowd who heard him.

Competition for the premiums offered, although small, was very keen.

The music was furnished by a band of 24 pieces including seven girls, which was an added attraction. The band was from Tollsboro, Lewis county.

The School Rally closed Saturday night with a concert by the Owingsville band, their second appearance in public, which was greatly enjoyed by the large crowd who heard it. The compliments showered on the boys are calculated to spoil them. This annual rally and commencement, furnishing as it does, two days of free and instructive entertainment is decidedly the most pleasurable event of the season and grows in interest each year.

EUGENE SHEEHAN.

The body of Eugene Sheehan, brought from the Argonne American burying ground in France, arrived here Friday night and was taken to the home of his sister Mrs. Andrew Coyle. After services at Mrs. Coyle's home Sunday afternoon conducted by Rev. C. L. Wilson, Chaplain of Bath Post No. 42 American Legion, the body was taken in charge by the Legion and buried in full military honors at Owingsville cemetery by the side of his father, mother, one brother and one sister.

Eugene Sheehan was a son of Daniel Sheehan and wife, both deceased, and was born and reared at this place. He enlisted in the army at Addyston, Ohio, where he was employed at the time. He was a member of Co. C, Fourth Infantry, Third Division U. S. A. He was killed in the Meuse Argonne offensive, October 21, 1918, after having participated in the Aisne defensive, the Champagne-Marne defensive, the Aisne-Marne offensive and the St. Mihiel offensive.

Eugene Sheehan was a Catholic in religion and was a young man of excellent moral character and is kindly remembered here by his school mates and associates. At the time of his death he was entitled to wear the Victory Ribbon with six stars each star representing a battle in which he had been engaged. He seems to have been very popular with his army comrades. Col. G. A. Herbert, commanding the 4th Infantry, writes Eugene's sister Mrs. Coyle "He was a man among men—a man's man—faithful in the performance of his duties and to the last repose in him by you and yours and the country he so nobly served."

A large concourse of sympathizing friends attended the funeral a burial. Eugene was 34 years old when he died.

Asks Reduction of Assessment

The heirs of Jas. Bigstaff, deceased, of Mt. Sterling, brought suit in Judge Atchison's court asking a reduction of the Tax Commissioner's valuation of 1,800 acres of land in Bath county. The land is Flat Creek land and was assessed at $130 an acre. Judge Atchison reduced this $10, an acre. This was unsatisfactory and the case was appealed to the Circuit Court.

The ticket for City Councilmen, and Police Judge has been made up and the race is on in earnest.

THE RECITAL

The recital given by Prof. E. M. Coleman, teacher of the band lately organized, far exceeded expectations in point of the delightful entertainment furnished by the Professor. He played to perfection solos on all the band instruments and especially were his violin solos enjoyed and appreciated. The attendance was not as large as hoped for and those who failed to attend missed a rare musical treat. The recital was supplemented by music by the band which was their first appearance in public. The entire proceeds of the entertainment were given for the benefit of the band.

SHROUT, PIPER & SHROUT

About 6:30 o'clock Tuesday evening a man by the name of Williams in jail on charge of horse-stealing and Chester Thompson, a 14-year-old boy, confined on the charge of robbing a store at Salt Lick, escaped. They unlocked the door with a key made from a piece of iron taken from a cot. But the boys had reckoned without knowing that Slate creek was out of its banks and they could cross it only at one of the bridges, and Jailer Duff overtook them just as they started to cross upper Slate bridge on the Preston pike and returned them to jail.

625,000 BOTTLES SOLD IN NEW YORK

Biggest Thing of Kind Ever Seen in That State, Declares Big Wholesaler.

The fact that 625,000 bottles of Tanlac have been sold in the state of New York since its introduction there less than one year ago, is a big business item that will attract unusual attention throughout the entire East, for nothing like it has ever happened before. It breaks all records.

Mr. George B. Evans, manager of the Gibson-Snow Company, the well-known wholesale druggists, with branches in Albany, Buffalo, Rochester and Syracuse, recently announced that the preparation was now selling in their trade territories alone at the phenomenal rate of approximately 500,000 bottles a year.

"If the present rate continues," said Mr. Evans, "this state alone will probably require considerably over 750,000 bottles a year. This is a tremendous figure, but I am really conservative in making this statement."

Tanlac is sold by leading druggists everywhere—Advertisement.

"SHOWING OFF" THE COLONEL

Storekeeper Had Eye for Business in Keeping Good-Looking Customer Waiting for Attention.

A woman in a small town asked her husband, Colonel Blank, to call in at the dairy when passing to order some new-laid eggs. After making a brief detour the colonel yielded. A little later he called at the shop in question, quite a small and unimportant establishment on a back street.

Two or three minutes passed; then, as no one came to serve him, the colonel gave a gentle knock on the counter. This had no effect; so a smart double rap was given. Then a curly-headed youngster put his head around the door and announced, "Father's a-comin'."

By the time the father arrived the colonel was boiling with rage.

"What do you mean by keeping me waiting all this time?" he roared.

"Very sorry, sir," said the man, "but you see it's like this. You're the very first good-looking man that I've had in my shop, and as there were a lot of people passing by I thought what a good advertisement you was a standing there."—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

"Higgins isn't a very attractive name," he said, "but the girl herself is a beauty."

"How shall I know her?" asked the other interested at once.

"Well," said the secretary, "she's the only girl I know with Yale eyes and a Harvard complexion."

Mr. and Mrs. Jones had been invited to a friend's home for tea, and the time had arrived for preparing for the visit.

"Come along, dearie," said Mrs. Jones to her three-year-old son, "and have your face washed."

"Don't want to be washed," came the reply.

"But," said mother, "you don't want to be a dirty little boy, do you? I want my little boy to have a nice clean face for the ladies to kiss."

Upon this persuasion he gave way and was washed.

A few minutes later he stood watching his father washing.

"Ha, ha, daddy," he cried. "I know why you're washing!"

My glance wandering about the room aimlessly fell upon the vase in one corner. It was just where I remembered leaving it when I went out, yet I saw something which surely resembled a slash in the leather. I crossed over, and bent down; it was a slash, the clean cut of a knife, running from end to end, penetrating through both leather and cloth. Who ever had done the deed had been unable to operate the lock, and had used the blade as a last resort, slitting the entire bag wide open. I inserted my hand and felt within; nothing seemed missing, or greatly disturbed. I explored to the bottom, and then sprang to my feet in startled amazement—the dagger I had concealed there was gone!

Good God! what could be the meaning of this? She had worn that ornament in her hat openly, purposely, and had been holding her innocent. There could be no other explanation. She had confessed being at the hotel, seeking to locate me, and the number of my room. What would prevent her coming up here unobserved, then, while I was out, and gaining entrance?

"What was she doing by keeping me waiting all this time?" he roared.

"Very sorry, sir," said the man, "but you see it's like this. You're the very first good-looking man that I've had in my shop, and as there were a lot of people passing by I thought what a good advertisement you was a standing there."—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

instinct of defense led me to step aside, so that I should have my back to the wall. Harris sat in the easy chair, with feet elevated on the desk, sardonically grinning at me over a half-chewed cigar tilted between his teeth. A white rag was bound round his head, through which a few drops of blood had oozed, leaving a dark stain. Leaning against the wall opposite was Waldron, one eye half-closed, and his lip split, giving to his face a look of savage brutality, rendered peculiarly sinister by a grim effort to smile. Costigan stood motionless, with back against the door, as though thus barring all possibility of escape. I had walked into their trap, and the jaws had closed.

The grin on Harris' face hardened me. "Well," I said coldly, "it was a stall, wasn't it? Is that the idea?" He laughed, without changing his attitude.

"This happens to be our turn to play, Daly," he returned, apparently well satisfied with his smartness.

"Then you have nothing to tell me?" "Oh, yes, I have; I've got a B-I-I of a lot to tell you. But first of all you are going to tell me a few things. Push back your right sleeve to the elbow, shirt and all."

"What's that for?"

"Never you mind what it's for; you do what I say, if you know what is best for yourself."

I looked at the faces of the others, but they were hard as flint. My hesitancy caused Harris to lower his feet, and sit up angrily.

"Push up that sleeve, you, or I'll have Waldron do it for you. We've got you foul, you fool!"

I stripped back my sleeve, exposing my right forearm, yet never removing my eyes from their faces. Harris and Costigan bent forward, intent on

"You know who she is, you say?" "Sure I do. Old Pierre, over at Peron's, told me. He never forgets a face, or a name, that old duffer. He knew you the minute you blew in, and he knew her, too; she'd been there before slumping."

"Who is she, then?"

"That's all right—I know; but I ain't got enough to blow it over the wire. If you'll come over here and have a talk, I'll spill a few things in your ear that'll make you wise."

"Where are you?"

"At Costigan's."

"What's become of your partner?" "Who's that—Waldron? He ain't no partner of mine. Say, you must have handed that guy some jolt. The last I saw of him, he was laid out on a bench in Peron's back room breathing like a stuck pig, dead to the world. Will you come over now?"

"OUR BOYS"
Now the cruel war is over and our boys come marching home.
"Mid the honor and the glory of a victory well won!
Every one a grand true hero,
Here at home and across the sea, Every one at post of duty and as true as true could be.

True to honor and "Old Glory."
True to loved ones left at home.
For they crushed the tyrant's rule
And now are true to all the world.
Some have crossed the sea of glory
Passed the line of "no man's land."
And are standing attention at the Savior's Own Right Hand.
Some have left amid the ruin, parts of bodies once so dear,
And have come back home to loved ones, Maimed and battle scarred, but true.

Yes our boys are noble heroes,
Whether Kahki, Green or Blue, They've been tried, we know what's in them,
Hearts that are noble grand and
true.

Now three cheers for "Old Glory"
And three cheers for our boys too,
May their days be bright and happy.
As their life they journey through,
And when the last sad "Tap" is sounded
And the bugle calls no more,
May their parade ground be in heaven,
Where all partings will be o'er.
Written by Fannie House Scott, to "Our Boys."

Sun and Shadow.
Life is beautiful and should be lived in beauty. It has been said that life is like a shadow, but there is a beauty in the shadow as well as in the light and glitter of the sun. In grief and trouble, and even in disaster, we can make life beautiful—beautiful with courage, with resignation and a sublime faith in the wisdom of that Creator "who doeth all things for the best." Sometimes there are sorrows that are good for us, because they clear our hearts of selfishness and teach us to sympathize with our fellow human beings.
Grief has made many a heart gentle that was not so before. We must take the joy and the sorrow together, permitting neither the one nor the other to make us forget life's real reason for existence.—Los Angeles Times.

Honor "Merry Monarch."
Down to the middle of the last century the statue of Charles I. at Charting Cross, London, was decorated on each May 20 with boughs of oak, while in towns and villages large branches were hung from the windows and upright boughs placed against the doors.
The oak was chosen in delicate allusion to King Charles II. having hidden in the oak tree at Boscombe after the battle of Worcester. The custom was not always looked upon with favor, for in the memories of a parish clerk written by John Arbuthnot about 1700 years ago, one finds the statement about "Amos Tarnier, a worthy person, rightly esteemed amongst us for his sufferings in that he had been honored in the stocks for wearing an oaken branch."

What is known as night-blindness is a rare condition in which the patient towards evening finds that objects are becoming less and less distinct, and at last he is totally blind. This may occur without previous warning and cause great alarm, but the next morning the victim of the condition finds to his delight that his sight is restored.
This is repeated every night, but at last the eyes become so weak during the day also, that the victim may become partially or totally blind. This strange affliction may be epidemic. It has attacked bodies of troops exposed to the glare of the searchlight in the sun's rays, is seldom met with in temperate climates, except among sailors just returned from tropical regions.
It is frequent among the natives of some parts of India, who attribute it, as our own sailors do, to sleeping exposed to the glare of the searchlight.
The most probable cause of the affection is, however, exhaustion of the power of the retina from over-excitement, or from excessive light, so that this organ is rendered incapable of appreciating the weaker stimulating action of twilight or moonlight.

Finced For Violating Game Law
Josh Owings and O. C. Evans, of Mt. Sterling, were before Judge Atchison's court Tuesday morning on warrants charging them with violating the game law in Bath county.
There were eleven warrants issued charging violation of the game law but as there was some confusion about them a fine of $30 and costs, amounting in all to $52.55, was agreed to by the court and the defendants. The warrants charged hunting game out of season and hunting without license.

Honorary Admitted Error.
The first and only edition of Cavalier's "Geometrical Discussions," published in Bologna, 1647, was liberally illustrated with woodcuts of explanatory diagrams. At least the diagrams were explanatory to the intended. Evidently they failed to make the matter in hand clear to the printer for he looked one of the cuts in the form upside down and so it went to press. One may easily imagine the consternation of Professor Cavalieri, the father of calculus, when he discovered the mistake. Probably to appease him, the apologetic publisher caused the error to be corrected, and the pulled and-pasted in each copy of the book over the inverted diagram.
The honest printer for his part did not seek to hide his original fault, but left one end unpatched so that today lifting the flap reveals the mistake beneath.
—Christian Science Monitor.

These Leaders Were Eaters.
General Grant is said to have praised soup. Thackeray wrote a poem on French soup. Mark Hanna's hash made him and many of his friends happy. The great Emerson had a weakness for pie. The famous recipe was broken when the barrel of caviar regularly sent to him every year was forwarded to his successor after the "Man of Iron" had been removed from office. Napoleon compelled his cooks always to have broiled chicken at hand.
From the Mrs. Lister's recipe for "Venus of tea." King Henry I of England liked kemping so well that he died from eating them.

Wonderful "Universal Language." Among other attempts at a universal language is "Hlak," or "Blue." The shades of meaning in this particular tongue are got by tacking on to basal words syllables, or sometimes just a single letter, so as to get different sign features. "Vintually," for instance, is windmill and "Danfamily," steam mill. If you want to speak of a mill run by water, you say "Vintu-ally." The numerals are a little confusing. Take such a number as 1,123, and it comes out as "Mel venson dovls gab," i. e., one thousand one hundred and twenty-six. "Blue" spelling is entirely phonetic, and you do not have to dot your i's, or cross your t's. It is called "blue" because this is the color of the sky, and the inventor hoped—or hoped that all under the blue of the firmament would hastily adopt this amazing tongue

Fireflies.
The dictionary defines a firefly as an insect which has the faculty of becoming luminous; a lampyrid or elaterid beetle which emits some phos-phorescent light from organs in some part of the body. One of the commonest American species is a lampyrid, Photinus pyralis, vulgarly called "lightning bug." The larva also is luminous, and the child who thinks he has found the business end of a firefly resting in the grass may be informed that this is the larva. The Encyclopedia Britannica is inclined to the belief that the light shed by a firefly is a signal to mate or combat, thus affording recognition in the dark

Does Mississippi Flow Uphill?
There is such an impression but it is incorrect. The question is raised by inaccurate use of the terms "uphill" and "downhill." People are inclined to speak of "down" and "up" in respect to distance from center of the earth. If only a small area is considered this is true, but in referring to widely separated localities, such as the rise and mouth of the Mississippi system, such a definition does not hold good. The mouth of the Mississippi is about four miles further from the center of the earth than its source. The combined effect of gravity and centrifugal force makes the water run downhill though actually the water moves away from the center of the earth in doing so.

Mortality of Men and Women.
As a rule, men die younger than women. In 1915 the death rate in this country averaged 39.2 years for men as compared with 40.6 years for women.
The average life of man is probably about 40 years, and the average life of women probably thirty years. The difference between the two is due to the fact that men are more exposed to hazards than women. The difference in age averages about three years. That is why the laws are so arranged that men become of age at twenty-one and women at eighteen.

We Wonder.
A sufferer who lives close to a railroad in the suburbs wrote the following to the railroad company, complaining about the racket made by a switch-engine: "Gentlemen—Why is it that your switch engine has to ding and dong and fizz and spit and bang and biss and pant and grate and grind and puff and bump and clug and boor and roar and whistle and wheeze and jar and howl and snarl and puff and growl and clug and boor and clash and jolt and screech and snort and snarl and slam and throb and roar and rattle and yell and smoke and spout and shriek like hell all night long?"—Boston Globe.

Not That Kind.
The Owner of the Poind—"Yes, Napoleon is a nice little dog. I don't wonder that you admire him." The Owner of the Alread—"It isn't that, but I'm just dying to know where you got that lovely permanent wave for him. I want to have my dog done the same way."

Premature Burial Impossible.
In Wildwood cemetery, Williamsport, Va., is located what is thought to be the only tomb of its kind in the world. It was built to the order of a citizen of that community 30 years ago to insure that none of his relatives should ever be buried alive. At the time of interment the body is removed from the casket and placed in one of the five vault compartments.
These are lined with heavy felt to prevent injury, should the supposed dead recover and become panic-stricken. Ducts supply fresh air to all compartments so that one in a state of trance may not be suffocated.
So person, other than the owners of the keys, can unlock and open the anxious iron compartment covers from the outside, but they can be opened from the inside by handwheels.
